Dear Mr. Chairman:

I am writing in reference to ET Docket No. 93-7. I believe that the FCC in its rule making process should require that all cable systems adopt a national compatibility standard, so that cable subscribers can plug in there own equipment with the assurance that all their equipment features will be functional.

In addition make any converter boxes and remote controls necessary for the complete utilization of the cable service available through a competitive second source.

The consumers of the US spend Millions every year on equipment that they anticipate will connect to there current system only to find frustration. The FCC now has the power within there domain to correct this very serious problem. Please work with and support the Home Recording Rights Coalition.

Sincerely,

Christopher P. Chigas
